Interpersonal Wellness Services Inc. Welcomes New Toronto Associate Alyusha Maharaj has Joined The Team of Workplace Wellness Facilitators and Consultants

Interpersonal Wellness Services Inc. (IWS) has appointed Alyusha Maharaj as its Toronto Associate.

Alyusha is heading up the Toronto branch and brings a wealth of skills and expertise to this role. Alyusha is a Workplace Wellness Consultant, Wellness Facilitator, Certified Coach, and Lawyer with a background in sales, training and coaching.

Headquartered in Winnipeg, Manitoba Interpersonal Wellness Services Inc. is a 22-year-old training and development company specializing in creating a culture of wellness at work. Interpersonal Wellness Services Inc. offers a nine-dimensional approach to wellness at work that reduces workplace tension and stress, promotes greater employee engagement, supports personal growth to spur organizational innovation and growth.

Interpersonal Wellness Services Inc. is also well known globally for its quarterly hosting of the Global Workplace Wellness Summit. This professional development online summit brings together speakers and experts from around the world who share cutting-edge, thought leadership to empower organizations to create effective and sustainable wellness programs.

“Interpersonal Wellness Services Inc. is excited to bring its unique ‘whole system, nine-dimensional wellness approach’ for workplace improvement to the Toronto market, says the company’s President and Founder, Joyce Odidison. “While most workplace wellness programs focus on the physical-health dimension of wellness, we take a ‘whole person’ approach.”

“I am very excited to be part of this company and the impact it has on organizations and on employees”, says Alyusha. “Joyce has inspired me with her holistic approach, which I know is very needed in the hyper-competitive Toronto market where the stress of daily work-life is affecting the well-being of so many employees”.
